

MHM Management Change

ASX Release – 10 September 2013

Appointment of new CEO

MHM Metals Limited (ASX:MHM) today announced the resignation of Mr Robert McAlister as Chief Executive Officer. Mr Matthew Keen has been appointed as his replacement with immediate effect.

Mr Keen, who holds an Electrical and Electronic Engineering degree, has 15 years' experience in both engineering and finance and in a variety of senior roles. He has worked in complex engineering, mining, construction and infrastructure projects both locally and internationally. Most recently he was the Managing Director of Queen Street Capital, a private corporate advisory business where he gained enormous experience across a range of projects and professional networks.

Mr Iain Kirkwood, Chairman said "The Board thanks Robert for his contribution over the past six months in assisting the MHM recovery. We are fortunate to have attracted a CEO of Matt's calibre who has accepted the challenge to lead the business out of its current stabilisation and re-structuring phase. More particularly he is well qualified to develop and execute its growth strategies. The company will benefit from his technical experience and extensive professional network".
